McGUINNESS SPEAKS ON PRESIDENTS DAY

The senior commander of the Natick Soldier Systems Center could think of no better place to spend Presidents Day. That's why Brig. Gen. John J. McGuinness spoke Feb. 20 to members of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Massachusetts, situated at Faneuil Hall in Boston, during its 127th Presidents Day Luncheon.

BRINGING IMMEDIATE PROTECTION TO SOLDIERS

Your unit deployed so rapidly to the remote location that there was no time to set up sandbags and concrete barriers to protect the base camp. Those systems are heavy and time-consuming to erect. And by the time you establish them, today's fluid battlefield might have you up and moving again.

NSRDEC ENGINEER NAMED BALLISTICS FELLOW

Philip Cunniff, a mechanical engineer at Natick Soldier Research, Development and Engineering Center, was named a Fellow of the International Ballistics Society. The society is the world's largest scientific organization dedicated to ballistics research and is a leading source of authoritative scientific information for ballistics science.
