BG GREENE SPEAKS AT ABERDEEN

The U.S. Army is significantly changing the way it does business with defense contractors, a senior Aberdeen Proving Ground leader said Jan. 18. Industry has a vital role in helping the military save money as it faces budget cuts, said Brig. Gen. Harold Greene, deputy commanding general, U.S. Army Research, Development and Engineering Command.

RDECOM COMMANDER LEADS PANEL

Training the American warfighter in the digital age in the midst of substantial budget constraints was among topics discussed at the 10th annual TechNet-Orlando Conference. The panel was led by Maj. Gen. Nick Justice, commanding general, U.S. Army Research, Development and Engineering Command, and consisted of members of the military's training and evaluation community.
