NATICK OBSERVES PATRIOT DAY

Ten years after the unforgettable events of 9/11, military and civilian workers gathered Sept. 9 to observe Patriot Day at Natick Soldier Systems Center.

LOOKING BACK ON 9/11

A handful of moments in history forever remind those who lived through them of where they were and what they were doing at the time. The morning of Sept. 11, 2001, provided one of those enduring moments.

10 YEARS LATER: MISSION IS TO GUARD SOLDIERS

In a small, brightly lit chamber in a basement at Natick Labs, Soldier volunteers run on treadmills and ride exercise bikes in conditions that simulate the altitude of Pike's Peak - about 14,000 feet. Though it may not look like it, Army research scientists say those Soldiers are helping win the global fight against terrorism.

GARRISON COMMANDER REMEMBERS 9/11

Lt. Col. Frank Sobchak, commander of the U.S. Army Garrison-Natick, remembers the growing concern he and his classmates at Georgetown University felt on Sept. 11, 2001 when their normally prompt Arabic studies professor did not show.

EMPLOYEES TAKE HELICOPTER TRIP TO DEVENS

Forty Natick Soldier Research, Development and Engineering Center employees got a rare treat Aug. 17 - the chance to ride in a Black Hawk helicopter to Fort Devens and see the Base Camp Systems Integration Lab to get a small taste of what it is like to be a Soldier.
